ED.D. IN EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP

The doctoral program (Ed.D.) in Educational Leadership provides the highest professional degree available to candidates who aspire to leadership positions in Education, primarily in K-12 settings. The degree involves successful completion of a prescribed curriculum of both required and elective courses in professional studies, theory, and research methods up to a minimum of 60 hours of graduate credit. The doctoral degree is awarded upon successful completion of coursework and defense of a dissertation, which is a major independent research project carried out under the supervision of faculty advisors.

Graduates of the doctoral degree in Educational Leadership will have acquired the knowledge and skills to lead K-12 school systems and act in a leadership and consulting capacity in diverse educational organizations. The doctoral program focuses on developing leader-scholars who are prepared to effectively lead educational organizations by (a) supporting professional development for instructional improvement; (b) applying evidence-based practices in educational research and program evaluation through research design and interpretation; and (c) advocating for sound policies that support the success of all students.

Admission to the doctoral program in Educational Leadership is competitive. Applicants are encouraged to submit required materials and prepare a high-quality personal statement and resume.

The Educational Leadership doctoral program utilizes a cohort model where individuals are admitted as a group or a cohort. Cohort members take their courses together in a face-to-face setting. Cognates (electives) vary. Some students complete the Texas superintendent certification as their cognate area. A select number of applicants are admitted to a cohort.

Admission Deadlines

The priority deadline for cohort admission is March 1. Priority is given to completed applications. Applications will be accepted until the university deadline based on space availability.

The program uses a cohort-based model. New cohorts begin each Summer semester. To ensure full consideration for cohort admission, applicants should submit all required materials before the priority deadline. A limited number of applicants for non-cohort-based admission may be considered in other semesters. Only applicants who meet institutional deadlines for admission in those semesters will be considered. Non-cohort-based admission is not guaranteed and is dependent upon space.

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB) marketable skills initiative is part of the state's 60x30TX plan and was designed to help students articulate their skills to employers. Marketable skills are those skills valued by employers and/or graduate programs that can be applied in a variety of work or education settings and may include interpersonal, cognitive, and applied skill areas.

The EdD Educational Leadership degree is designed to provide graduates with the following marketable skills:

- Collect, analyze, and interpret data through the lens of theories and practice.
- Defend research findings to practitioners and researchers.
- Employ advanced oral and written communication skills.
- Synthesize empirical literature for research trends.
- Design, conduct, report, and share independent research projects.
